The Educational Audiology Association is an international organization of Audiologists and related professionals who deliver a full spectrum of hearing services to all children, particularly those in educational settings. The mission of EAA is to act as the primary resource and active advocate for its members through its publications and products, continuing educational activities, networking opportunities, and other professional endeavors.

What Does An Educational Audiologist Do?

- Coordinate hearing screening programs
- Provide community awareness about hearing
- Conduct comprehensive hearing evaluations
- Provide management for hearing aids and other assisting devices
- Provide medical and community referrals
- Assist in program placement
- Provide therapy in the areas of speech reading, listening, and hearing aid care
- Participate in multidisciplinary team meetings
- Counsel families about effects of hearing loss
- Provide training to staff
- Educate about noise pollution
- Evaluate educational environments for noise

Public schools are mandated by the Individuals With Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) to provide the above services.

What is EAA?

The Educational Audiology Association is an international organization of audiologists and related professionals who deliver a full spectrum of hearing services to all children, particularly those in educational settings. EAA was established in 1984 to advocate for educational audiologists and the students they serve. AAA and ASHA recognize EAA as a related professional organization (RPO) which facilitates direct communication between EAA, AAA, ASHA, and others to provide a forum for EAA issues. Through the efforts of the EAA Board of Directors and active committees, EAA provides unique services & responds to issues and concerns which shape the profession.

EAA Educational Events

EAA sponsors a biannual Summer Conference to provide state-of-the-art continuing education and opportunities for exchanging clinical and professional information with colleagues from around the country. These events are an excellent way to keep up-to-date in a rapidly changing field and offer individual members an opportunity to express their concerns and voice their opinions in a supportive environment.

EAA Publications

Through its publications, EAA communicates the activities and ideas of educational audiologists across the nation.

- Educational Audiology Review: State-of-the-art clinical information and articles on current professional issues and concerns; published online four times a year, of approximately 28 pages.
- Journal of Educational Audiology: Articles relating to the practice of educational audiology; published every year.

EAA Professional Materials

Nowhere else can an educational audiologist find proven instruments, tests, videos, and forms created and tested by educational audiologists. EAA's product line has grown exponentially as members share their expertise and develop proven materials invaluable to the profession.

EAA Web Site

In addition to an ever-expanding web site at www.edaud.org, (contains online, searchable membership directory) EAA members are encouraged to subscribe to its listserv for immediate feedback and problem-solving with their peers around the world.

EAA State Network

State Membership contacts assist with coordinating state and local meetings and membership recruitment. They may also act as a liaison for local and state issues and concerns.

EAA Membership

EAA Regular membership is open to audiologists, speech-language pathologists, teachers of the hearing impaired or professionals from related fields who have an active interest in the mission of the association. Individuals who supply products and services who are not included in a Corporate Membership can join as Affiliate Members. Students in audiology with a Bachelor's degree are also encouraged to join and apply for EAA's scholarship opportunities.
